Preparing Your Tween for Middle School Make Contact

Many middle schools offer an open house or a "getting to know us" evening for both children and parents. Such events are wonderful opportunities for both you and your son or daughter to familiarize yourselves with the new school. If such opportunities aren't offered, don't hesitate to call the school to request a tour with the principal or the guidance counselor. Your child may get more out of a tour if he invites a classmate along.

Discuss the Middle School Rules

If your middle schooler tends to find out about rules the hard way, save him a little time by going over the school's dress code, cell phone rules, bus rules, and cafeteria rules. Discuss the school's consequence policy (and yours, too).
